REPORT FROM THE NELLIP WORKSHOP

LUND 2014-03-11

The reason:

- I was very curious about knowing more about Nellip and I want to start a language project at our school.
- Interesting to meet other language teachers and listen to different projects
- To get ideas
- Needed new input
- I was asked to be a moderator, being an ex-winner of ELL
- To get inspiration to start an international project with pupils in our school
- I want to improve my pupils' skills in speaking and find new contacts with French speaking teenagers
- I want to learn more about how other schools work to increase my pupils' skills to communicate in German.
- I was curious about your project Language Cafés
- I wanted to discuss more ideas for how I can motivate the students to communicate. It's fun to hear how other teachers work.
- To get input how to build a project that is feasible
- Curiosity! Wish to get inspiration and new ideas and suggestions
- I wanted to get information about different projects, mainly Language Café.
- To know more about Language Cafés, to improve my ongoing project with Spain.

Comments:

- Very interesting and useful discussions
- Too short time for each subject
- I liked to get connected to other teachers to share experiences. I am inspired to start a project and to read about everything I've heard today.
- It was very nice to meet other teachers in this context. Thank you!
- I liked that we actually wrote down how we could work in a project. We came up with good ideas just like I expected. Thank you very much!
- Theory and practice in a good mixture

- To me the time was too short to read the guidelines and because of this there was too little time to do the rest. The reason could be that I had to leave for a while. Completely satisfied with content, organization ...
- Heard about some new projects, got new ideas – good! Always nice to exchange ideas with other language teachers. A bit stressful, hard to get into a task before it was time to break. Would have liked to get more tangible input around projects, for example the ones they mentioned in the transnational meeting. Rather information about their project than information around their view on quality etc. You were very professional Thank you!
- Nice to meet other language teachers and exchange ideas, and get feedback on you own projects.
- I was/am inspired to start a project and I need to talk about and to get ideas from other teachers who are in the same position. Thank you so much for organizing this day. Too short time to look for and read about different projects.
- I would have liked having more time with looking at the different projects. Maybe you could have shown us a bit more excellent examples of how a project could be like. The online meeting was more fun than beneficial. But I was very inspired by all the projects during this day. Thank you for all!
