Conclusions (1)

- ▶ The participants in the first group did not know about the existence of the award and as a result they had never applied for it although they had run successful language projects. They openly expressed their interest in submitting their language projects in the future.
- ▶ The representatives of the universities admitted that they had never applied because they thought that the selection criteria were very difficult to meet (especially originality criterion). The workshop helped them clarify and even dispel some doubts.
- ▶ The representatives from the vocational schools said that the focus of most of their projects is not on language. The workshop demonstrated that they could integrate language items in their professional projects. They also stated that they had applied for the European Label with one of their project but failed. This lack of success demotivated them and therefore they no longer applied.

Conclusions (2)

- ▶ the Guidelines developed by the Nellip Network will be an important tool to use when developing projects and applying for the European Label
- ▶ all participants agreed that the workshops helped them a lot by informing them about the European Language Label and provided them with reliable strategies and hands-on instructions on how to apply for such an award
- ▶ everybody was of the opinion that the workshop was useful and they looked forward to implementing the information acquired in their institutions
- ▶ great opportunity on sharing project ideas. Raising awareness on tips on quality and innovative elements on projects
- ▶ the workshop inspires confidence, I will involve more in projects
- ▶ I was able to find out very useful information about European projects and which are the interests of the European Commission
- ▶ the portal offer access to many interesting resources
